Release Reporting

Release reporting is not something to get wrong. Whether in the heat of an emergency or complying with ongoing reporting obligations, the stakes are high—regulators and the public are deeply concerned about releases.

ELG attorneys have experience across the range of reporting issues, from crafting guidance to assisting with initial reports to advising on Toxic Release Inventory submittals. We understand there is a premium on getting it right during an event as well as making sure all facility stakeholders have an accurate understanding of a facility's true footprint. ELG can help with all aspects of release reporting.

FOLLOWING ARE EXAMPLES OF RECENT WORK:

- » TRI reporting—Working with facilities to properly interpret and meet TRI reporting requirements
 - » Pollution prevention planning—Assisting facilities in implementing pollution prevention plans to meet state and federal reporting obligations and achieve reduction results
 - » GHG Reporting—Helping facilities understand and meet their greenhouse gas reporting obligations
 - » Risk reporting—Advising facilities on Risk Management Planning (RMP) obligations and helping communicate the results of those planning efforts
- » Event reporting systems—Working with clients to establish event reporting guidance to address both state and federal requirements for reporting release events
 - » Follow up reports for events—Reviewing follow-up submittals to regulators to ensure accuracy and minimize compliance risk
 - » Event response team—Helping guide response activities and public communication during an event
 - » Continuous release reporting—Helping facilities evaluate and properly report continuous releases under CERCLA and EPCRA
 - » Federally permitted releases—Helping facilities craft and implement reporting guidance related to the federally permitted release exemption
 - » EPCRA Tier II reporting—Working with companies to establish systems to properly evaluate and update facility Tier II reports
